Child Support Referral Notice

If you are a single parent, you may be entitled to child support payments from the other parent of your child(ren). These payments are not optional and are your right, even if the other parent lives with you, shares custody, or otherwise contributes to the maintenance of your household. A court order is required for non-voluntary child support to be provided. Child support orders can be obtained for obligatory parents who have seasonal work, work part-time, or otherwise have intermittent employment or no employment at all (via tax refund intercepts).

County services exist to help you do the following:

- Establish paternity including genetic testing at a reduced cost.
- Locating the obligated parent.
- Obtain a court order for child support and medical insurance
- Enforce existing court orders for child support including withholding income from the obligated parent's wages, intercepting tax refunds, and obtaining liens against property owned by the obligated parents.
- Enforce existing court orders across state lines. This includes helping you establish a new order or enforce an existing one.

It is the obligation of both parents to provide for the welfare and financial cost of raising a child. If you have a child(ren) and are not receiving support from the other parent, please consider the referral information below to help you begin, increase, or modify your child support payments:
